

SUITS FOR YOUNG MEN

Young fellows of 15 to 20 years are notoriously hard to please in matters of dress.

That is why we take particular pains in catering to these young fellows of decided opinions.

Our Young Men's Suits are built on special lines and patterns, different in cut from the suits designed for older men.

Most of these dressy young chaps prefer to come here for their clothes, knowing that they are sure to find what they want.

Young Men's Suits, Single and Double Breasted styles, $5.00, $10.00, $12.00, up to $16.00

HELPS INDIAN SCHOOLS

Congressman Brown Secures Liberal Appropriations to Aid in Education of Indian Children in Tenth District.

Not only in securing fair play for the government wards in the welfare of timber from Indian reservation lands has Congressman Brown evidenced his intent to see that the Indians were fully protected but he has interested himself in improving the school facilities.

There are two government Indian schools located in the Tenth Congressional District, the Wittenberg school in Shawano County, and the Lac du Flambeau school, in Vilas County. In the 37th Congress Mr. Brown secured different sums in first and second sessions for repairs at these schools, etc. In the fall of 1903, about a month before the convening of the 58th Congress however, at the urgent request of Supt. Axel Jacobson, of the Wittenberg school, and Supt. Henry J. Phillips, of the Lac du Flambeau school, Mr. Brown visited both of these schools for the purpose of determining their exact needs, it being his intention to request the Committee on Indian Affairs to take up the subject in a practical way of making necessary improvements.

The Wittenberg school is in Shawano County, and up to the time of Mr. Brown's visit very little, if anything had been expended by the government for the betterment of the school. As a consequence there was an appearance of general neglect. The government several years ago had erected a building especially for school purposes, but this had been destroyed by fire. From statistics obtained from Mr. Jacobson, it was shown that about 140 children of school age were prevented from attending school on account of the crowded condition of the buildings.

At the convening Congress Mr. Brown laid the matter before the Committee on Indian Affairs, and as a result the sum of $27,000 was appropriated.

This sum became available on July 1st of this year, and after consultation with the Supt. of the school and Hon. W. A. Jones, Commissioner on Indian Affairs, it has been decided to expend this sum in the erection of a dormitory, school building, improvements and repairs, and a water and sewer system for the school. Bids for this work have been called for and will be opened and the contract awarded by Nov. 1st.

Mr. Brown's visit to the Lac du Flambeau school also convinced him that improvements were badly needed, and for this school he has secured $25,000. It has been decided to spend this money in the erection of a dormitory, school building, and a few repairs. Bids for this work have also been called for and will be opened and the contract let by Nov. 10th at the latest.

Back From Manitoba

Thos. McDermott, Jr., returned last Thursday morning from Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he had been summoned three weeks previous by the illness of his niece, Miss Katherine Hagan. Two weeks ago the young lady underwent a successful operation for appendicitis and when Mr. McDermott left her was on a fair way to recovery. Mr. McDermott says Winnipeg is one of the most prosperous as well as one of the prettiest cities in the northwest. Everything is on the boom. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is expending over $1,500,000 there this year in the way of building and general improvements. Among the structures now in the course of construction is a large passenger depot and a machine shop, which when completed will give employment to hundreds of men. The portion of Winnipeg's business district, recently destroyed by fire, is to be replaced by more modern and costlier buildings. Already work has been commenced toward this end. The farming land in the vicinity of Winnipeg and in fact throughout Manitoba, Mr. McDermott says, is very fertile and well adapted for farming and grazing purposes. As yet the country is not thickly settled and thousands of acres are being offered for sale at extremely low prices.

Woe of a Bachelor Democrat. D. H. Walker, a Democratic Senatorial candidate from this district has recently run up against an unanswerable argument against his election. In the lower counties it is charged that "he employs no labor, not even a hired girl." So far have he not denied the allegation.

WHAT WILL THIS YEAR SHOW?

Comparison Made of the Oneida County Vote of 1900 and 1902.

Just at this time there is an oft repeated question as to the vote of Oneida county two and four years ago. As few take the trouble to either remember or make a note of election figures a comparison of the vote on a few leading offices may not be uninteresting.

Oneida county in 1900 gave McKinley 1930 and Bryan 711 votes. McKinley's majority 1219.

LaFollette received 1801 and Homestead 730. LaFollette's majority 1071. For Congressman, Brown received 1577 and Schaeffer 675. Rhodian for state senator had 1771 and Krauth 730. Lane for assembly had 1752 and Darwin 711. On the county ticket, Kelly for sheriff received 1203 and Kearns 1151. Total vote polled for head of ticket 2531.

In 1902 the total vote on governor was 127 of which LaFollette received 1157 and Rose 630. Brown for congress had 1165 and Williams 691. Osborne for member of assembly 907, Stapleton 522. Amendment for sheriff 1124, Kearns 1033. The first named candidate for each of the above offices was a republican the second a democrat. In 1900 the entire republican county ticket was elected, with the exception of Kearns, sheriff, it was similarly successful in 1902.

SHOT WOMAN AND SELF

Three or four years ago there resided in this city Joseph Wiesler and wife and a family of six or eight children. The combined efforts of the father and mother seemed never to provide enough to keep want and distress from being always present in the home, and the charity of the good hearted and philanthropic people of Rhinelander was often invoked in their behalf. Later they moved to Minneapolis and were lost sight of until this week, when a tragedy took place in that city, with Mrs. Wiesler as one of the principals, which revealed their whereabouts. Of the affair the following particulars are obtained from the Minneapolis papers:

Mrs. Pauline Wiesler had separated from her husband and was living with her daughter, Mrs. Howard Valentine, at 1629 Fifth street, southeast. Charles Brown, a laboring man boarded with the family for a year or so past and had frequently importuned Mrs. Wiesler to secure a divorce from her husband, and marry him. This she refused to do up to a couple of months ago when Brown's attentions took the form of threats, and he was arrested and sent to the workhouse. Monday he was released and straightway went to the Wiesler home. Tuesday he was unable to find Mrs. Wiesler but in the evening located her at a saloon army meeting and walked home with her, again pressing her to marry him. She again declined, and when near her home he drew a revolver and shot her in the neck. She fell prostrate and Brown, seeing what he had done turned the pistol on his own head, pulled the trigger and fell dead a few feet from the woman he had attempted to murder. Mrs. Wiesler was removed to a hospital and though dangerously injured has a prospect of recovery. She is about thirty-eight years of age. Brown was a man of forty, whose only known relative is a sister at Racine.

High School Notes.

Saturday, Oct. 22 the local High School team met the Antigo eleven in a fierce battle on the latter city's gridiron. The game was one of the hardest ever fought on their grounds and resulted in a tie, 5 to 5. The game was played in 25 and 2 minute halves. As the local team was outwheeled by at least six pounds to a man, and the battle fought on the enemy's territory the result speaks well for the team.

As usual it took some time for the home players to warm up, and by that time the Antigo team had carried the ball across the goal line. Then they awoke and began playing with their old time vigor, but too late to score in the first half.

At the beginning of the second half after the first few downs, the weariness of the green, realizing the necessity of quick work, took the ball from their opponents, battling for the red and in 4 1/2 minutes, Sanderson the left half-back, supported by a perfect interference, cleared the end for a touchdown. During the remainder of the game, the Antigo eleven, taking advantage of their superior weight, played nothing but line plays and usually gained the necessary ground in three downs. For the last ten or fifteen yards the local team contested every inch of the ground, but slowly the distance to their goal diminished until only three yards lay between them and defeat and fifteen long seconds left to play. Another down and only one yard between the ball and their goal line, but in the next play not an inch was lost and time was called. Moreover, the ball was no longer in Antigo's possession for they had lost the ball on downs.

The next game will take place at Rhinelander without fail and will be with either Tomahawk or Antigo. The game will take place on the ball grounds. To meet the expenses of all the games that may be played at Rhinelander this fall a number of the High School boys have begun visiting with subscription lists, business men and others wishing to give.

Thursday afternoon a collection will be made in the school for the purpose of decorating and beautifying the rooms with works of art and in the same day a literary program will be given by the Juniors. Friday there will be no school.

THE STORY TELLER

THE LAST OF NINA'S LOVERS

BY ISOLA L. FORRESTER

"You won't find her that way," Sheldon stopped short on the path to the cottage, and looked back. There was an old, half-sunken pier at Norton's Landing. One side sloped almost to the water, but the other was high and safe on its picturesque jutting, stained green by the lapping river.

A figure in pink was perched at the far end of the pier. Nina never wore pink. She said it was ordinary. Nina's gowns were all in pastel tints. Also, the figure wore a large sunbonnet. Nina said that sunbonnets were ordinary, too, and topped her own pretty blonde curls with an airy creation in chiffon and tea roses.

"Don't whistle rag-time," said Sally, severely, when he was beside her. "It attracts the fish."

"I don't see any fish," he returned, mildly.

"There are lots and lots. If you keep looking steadily at the water, you can see them. I just saw a great big perch come along, and he chased my bait right off, and swallowed it with it. Fish are the meanest, smartest things you ever saw. Want to fish?"

"Not to-day, thanks, Sally."

"Oh, I forgot. You want to find Nina? If you go down past the boat-house, up to the board walk to the hotel, then over to the beach—"

"It's too far to travel," said Sheldon. "I'll fish. I'll find my own way."

Sally watched him thoughtfully as he reloaded the hook and cast out with a broad sweep.

"Fishin's awfully soothing, when you're worried," she said, after a time. "You have to keep still, anyway, and the water makes you so sleepy and rested when you hear it lapping against the pier."

"I'm not worried, Sally."

"Yes you are. Of course you don't notice it, but everybody else does. And I'm awfully sorry for you."

About Nina, you know. The white sunbonnet nodded at him sympathetically. "You really haven't the heart of a champion. You know Harry Barton and Wallace Stevens and old Mr. Dean? They all had it, too. Wallace had it worse. He wanted to jump off the lighthouse pier until I told him that Harry and Mr. Dean had chosen the same place, and he changed his mind. They all tell me about it, you know, because I'm her sister. I can tell when one's in love with her before she can. First they give me candy and loan me their 'fins' and say I'm awfully cute. Then after awhile they say they wish they had a sister like me. Then they want me to tell them all about Nina."

"Nina?"

"Coming, Creston?" he asked.

Creston shook his head, and he raised his cap to her. Sally saw that his face wore the same look that had been on Barton's and the rest when Nina had finished with them; but the hand that held the white cloth skirt from contact with the wet sides of the pier wore a single diamond ring, and Sally pondered.

"I am going back to the club-house," said Creston. "We sail south to-morrow."

When he had gone, Sally looked anxiously at Nina. She was smiling dreamily at the retreating yacht.

"Nina—Sally's tone was low and regretful—"Is he really going?"

"Really and truly. I think he is heading for the lighthouse pier this minute."

Sally reached for the fishpole, which Sheldon had cast aside, and threw out the line carefully.

"Well, I'm sorry for the last one, then," she said.

Sheldon raised a parol over Nina with proprietary interest, and shut out the view of the yacht as he kissed her.

"Pity me, Sally," he said. "I'm the last one. We were engaged last night."

Sally turned her back tactfully, and the white sunbonnet was mirrored in the water.

"Do it again, if you want to," she said, gently. "I won't peek. Only go away, or you'll scare the fish."

"Woman's Home Companion."

Timeless Government Sluts.

The most noticeable sluts in the world are those in the employ of the government. The other day at Harper, Kan., a United States detective arrested one F. L. Leffer, who has been working all summer with a thrashing machine crew in the neighborhood. About a year ago Leffer, then living in Pennsylvania, was divorced by his wife. During the trouble he wrote her a letter reflecting in a somewhat profane and obscene manner upon his father-in-law. The letter was turned over to the post office authorities. The government detectives followed Leffer all the way to Kansas where he was arrested.

Other Way About.

Mr. Jones is the man with the pull that gets ahead.

Mr. Jones—Don't you believe it; it is the man with the head that gets the pull.—Philadelphia Record.

"Which eye?"

"Cross your heart, hope to die, if you ever tell you'll lose your eye," chuckled Sally.

"Never."

"You're laughing now. I don't care. He was a lovely boy. And he said: 'Sally, let's run away, and never come back any more.' And I said: 'No, I am sorry to hurt your feelings, but I never will forget you or the honor you have done me as long as I live.' That's what Nina always says. And then I let him kiss me; and he wanted a lock of my hair, so I cut off a piece of Nina's long curl that she takes on the back of her head when there's a breeze. It wasn't just the color of my hair, but he didn't know, and that's what Nina does when they all beg locks of her hair. Why, she wouldn't have any hair left at all, you know. And then I let him kiss me a few times more, just to let him know I was really and truly sorry, and he went away. You're not a bit!"

Sheldon did not notice the bobbing cork. He was staring at a white sail that dived blithely to the breeze at the north end of the island.

"Isn't that Creston's yacht?"

"The White Ladger? Yes, that's his." She looked at it attentively, and wished. "It's just as well you didn't hunt Nina, because she's out there. Creston's splendid. He's got money, too; but that isn't it. I know Nina's in love with him, and it will all be fixed when they come back. I'll never let anybody propose to me on a yacht. Just get nicely started and have the sail flap at you, or something. And no one can handle a yacht when there's a breeze, can they? Isn't she going a little top-sy-turvy?"

Sheldon said something beneath his breath and turned back to the contemplation of the cork.

"But Nina won't mind anything when you're really in love. He's going south to-morrow, if she doesn't say she told me so, and I told Nina last night."

"They have wandered around, and are heading for the pier."

"Maybe the day is rough. You'll never catch a single fish if you both like that. Maybe I ought not to have told you, but you're the only one of the whole lot that I like, and when I told Nina you were in love with her—that was after you gave me the fishpole, so I knew—and that I wished she'd marry you, she said you were taller than Creston, and a dear boy. And one day I found her crying, and she told me she was in love, and she threw a pillow at me. And then I asked if it was you, and she threw two pillows. But when I said Creston, she just kept still and cried so I knew. They are coming this way."

"Do you think she'll take Creston?" asked Sheldon, without looking up.

"Oh, yes. I asked her, and she laughed and said she didn't marry him, she'd accept of you. That was Wallace did last Sunday night, but Nina would rather try the lighthouse pier herself than take Wallace."

Sheldon took one last look at the white yacht bearing down upon them, and suddenly devoted all his attention to the fishpole. There were three impaled beauties to his string when the White Ladger slipped gently alongside the pier, and when he caught the rope that Creston threw, he was smiling almost cheerfully, and Sally took heart. Nina was cool and sweet in white cloth barred in blue, and she smiled back at him as he helped her to the pier.

"Coming, Creston?" he asked.

Creston shook his head, and he raised his cap to her. Sally saw that his face wore the same look that had been on Barton's and the rest when Nina had finished with them; but the hand that held the white cloth skirt from contact with the wet sides of the pier wore a single diamond ring, and Sally pondered.

And one day I found her crying, and she told me she was in love, and she threw a pillow at me. And then I asked if it was you, and she threw two pillows. But when I said Creston, she just kept still and cried so I knew. They are coming this way."

"Do you think she'll take Creston?" asked Sheldon, without looking up.

"Oh, yes. I asked her, and she laughed and said she didn't marry him, she'd accept of you. That was Wallace did last Sunday night, but Nina would rather try the lighthouse pier herself than take Wallace."

Sheldon took one last look at the white yacht bearing down upon them, and suddenly devoted all his attention to the fishpole. There were three impaled beauties to his string when the White Ladger slipped gently alongside the pier, and when he caught the rope that Creston threw, he was smiling almost cheerfully, and Sally took heart. Nina was cool and sweet in white cloth barred in blue, and she smiled back at him as he helped her to the pier.

"Coming, Creston?" he asked.

Creston shook his head, and he raised his cap to her. Sally saw that his face wore the same look that had been on Barton's and the rest when Nina had finished with them; but the hand that held the white cloth skirt from contact with the wet sides of the pier wore a single diamond ring, and Sally pondered.

"I am going back to the club-house," said Creston. "We sail south to-morrow."

When he had gone, Sally looked anxiously at Nina. She was smiling dreamily at the retreating yacht.

"Nina—Sally's tone was low and regretful—"Is he really going?"

Sally reached for the fishpole, which Sheldon had cast aside, and threw out the line carefully.

"Well, I'm sorry for the last one, then," she said.

Sheldon raised a parol over Nina with proprietary interest, and shut out the view of the yacht as he kissed her.

"Pity me, Sally," he said. "I'm the last one. We were engaged last night."

Sally turned her back tactfully, and the white sunbonnet was mirrored in the water.

"Do it again, if you want to," she said, gently. "I won't peek. Only go away, or you'll scare the fish."

Timeless Government Sluts.

The most noticeable sluts in the world are those in the employ of the government. The other day at Harper, Kan., a United States detective arrested one F. L. Leffer, who has been working all summer with a thrashing machine crew in the neighborhood. About a year ago Leffer, then living in Pennsylvania, was divorced by his wife. During the trouble he wrote her a letter reflecting in a somewhat profane and obscene manner upon his father-in-law. The letter was turned over to the post office authorities. The government detectives followed Leffer all the way to Kansas where he was arrested.

"Which eye?"

"You're laughing now. I don't care. He was a lovely boy. And he said: 'Sally, let's run away, and never come back any more.' And I said: 'No, I am sorry to hurt your feelings, but I never will forget you or the honor you have done me as long as I live.' That's what Nina always says. And then I let him kiss me; and he wanted a lock of my hair, so I cut off a piece of Nina's long curl that she takes on the back of her head when there's a breeze. It wasn't just the color of my hair, but he didn't know, and that's what Nina does when they all beg locks of her hair. Why, she wouldn't have any hair left at all, you know. And then I let him kiss me a few times more, just to let him know I was really and truly sorry, and he went away. You're not a bit!"

"Isn't that Creston's yacht?"

"The White Ladger? Yes, that's his." She looked at it attentively, and wished. "It's just as well you didn't hunt Nina, because she's out there. Creston's splendid. He's got money, too; but that isn't it. I know Nina's in love with him, and it will all be fixed when they come back. I'll never let anybody propose to me on a yacht. Just get nicely started and have the sail flap at you, or something. And no one can handle a yacht when there's a breeze, can they? Isn't she going a little top-sy-turvy?"

Sheldon said something beneath his breath and turned back to the contemplation of the cork.

"But Nina won't mind anything when you're really in love. He's going south to-morrow, if she doesn't say she told me so, and I told Nina last night."

"Maybe the day is rough. You'll never catch a single fish if you both like that. Maybe I ought not to have told you, but you're the only one of the whole lot that I like, and when I told Nina you were in love with her—that was after you gave me the fishpole, so I knew—and that I wished she'd marry you, she said you were taller than Creston, and a dear boy. And one day I found her crying, and she told me she was in love, and she threw a pillow at me. And then I asked if it was you, and she threw two pillows. But when I said Creston, she just kept still and cried so I knew. They are coming this way."

The coming session of the legislature will demand members who are clear-headed, active and fair-minded; men who will use their best efforts to secure beneficial legislation and eliminate the vicious.

The Republicans of this 33rd assembly district have selected that kind of a man in the person of Edward A. Everett of Eagle River. Mr. Everett was born in Beloit, this state in 1861 and has always been a staunch Republican. During the past eight years he has resided at Eagle River and in that time has established one of the largest and best equipped summer resorts in this northern country. His business affairs are so arranged that if elected he can devote his entire time to the office. Every Republican voter in Iron, Oneida and Vilas counties wants to see Wisconsin in the "safe" column on Nov. 8th. To do this to assure the election of a Republican United States Senator, the voters must place every Republican assemblyman possible. Be sure when your ballot goes into the box it carries a vote for E. A. Everett.

In every national campaign for 40 years past the Republican party has stood upon its record of things done, of laws enacted, of policies established under which the country has progressed and prospered. The record of the democratic party made in two administrations was so full of disaster, of commercial shipwreck, of industrial paralysis and business failures that its chief business in recent years has been to get as far away from its record as possible.

From January 1, 1897, two months after Mr. McKinley's election, to January 1, 1900, the value of sheep in the United States rose from $67,000,000 to $122,000,000 and the wool crop increased from 111,355,557 pounds to 265,502,323. This boom in the sheep and wool business was not due to politics, but it was caused by a chance of policies.

At a special meeting of the Common Council, duly called and held on the 20th day of October, 1904.
Members present: Ball, Barnes, Crofoot, Dwyer, Guffey, Johnson, Koepeke, Swelberg and Stumpner.

Climatic Cures.
The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debility, tending night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottle 25c; regular size 75c. J. J. Reardon.

Millionaire's Poor Stomach.
The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Trial bottle 25c; regular size 75c. J. J. Reardon.

Cured a Comrade of Cholera Morbus and Saved His Life.
"While returning from the Grand Army encampment at Washington (City) in 1892, a comrade from Elgin, Ill., was taken with cholera morbus and was in a critical condition," says Mr. J. E. Houghland, of Elgin, Iowa. "I gave him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and believe saved his life. I have been engaged for ten years in immigration work and conducted many parties to the south and west. I always carry this remedy and have used it successfully on many occasions. No person traveling or at home should be without this remedy." For sale by Anderson & Hinman.

A man in New Jersey is running for office on the ground that he was hurt while helping his wife at the wash tub. He stepped on the soap and sprained his back. The mere sight of the wash tub sprains the average husband.

In favoring higher pay for the enlisted men, Gen. Fusion no doubt failed to take into consideration the fact that such an action might increase the popularity and popularity which have always been so distasteful to him.

One way to deal with railroad wrecks is to make it too expensive for a railroad to make and kill its patrons that it cannot afford not to provide for their safety. As long as human lives are cheaper than recently constructed passenger coaches there will be wrecks and the smoking cars and second class coaches will always be the first to go into hiding wood.

While official attendance statistics are not at all available from many of the institutions of higher learning in the country, estimates accurate enough for all practical purposes have been received and show that the colleges and universities will be more largely attended than ever before. The fact that more students than ever before are flocking this year to the colleges and universities is a sign of good times in more ways than one. It is not only the best possible evidence of popular belief in the higher education, but also indicates a widespread business prosperity.

The country is not wanting its good breath in shouting, is not throwing up its hat in wild political excitement. No doubt it is, as usual, thinking a great deal about what choice of a candidate it is going to make next month, but while doing that it is also attending to business and is doing it so vigorously and thoroughly as to give new impetus and vitality to the enterprises and activities which make for national wealth. The campaign managers may not think this is precisely as it should be, but the strong common sense of the country will not complain of it.

There is more than a grain of truth in the statement recently made that in our scramble for breakfast foods we have failed to appreciate the nourishing, health-giving properties of corn and corn meal. And the context of the statement mentioned deals in facts when it says that the corn and milk of a few years back produced children of a sturdier hue than those we are accustomed to see in these times. Corn meal is possessed of just those properties that make it a highly suitable winter food. Besides this, it seems an accompaniment for the most natural of foods.

WELCOME TO HARBIN!

OLD WEATHER BRINGS REST

EXHAUSTED ARMIES IN FAR EAST UNABLE TO FIGHT.

Lull Caused by Rains and Impassable Roads—Losses Are Enormous.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—Apart from skirmishes and exploits of scouting parties, there is almost a complete suspension of operations in Manchuria. The heavens have interposed to put a stop to bloodshed. Rain, impassable roads and exhausted armies are factors sufficient in themselves to explain the cessation of hostilities, and these conditions are aggravated by a dense fog over the whole of the theater of war.

Behind this pall either side would be able to change the disposition of whole forces in absolute secrecy, but the obscurity renders almost dangerous any attempt at a forward movement. When the curtain of mist is lifted the fighting may be resumed under totally changed conditions.

Neither Disposed to Yield.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—There is no change in the relative positions of the armies on the Shalke river. Gen. Sakharov telegraphs that the Russians have been bombarding Lamunung and the Buddhist temple at Linshingpu, while the Japanese have been shelling the Russian position at Shalke and near Linshingpu. A dispatch from Mukden reports that the Japanese are fortifying an important height south of Shalke and that neither side shows a disposition either to advance or retire.

Another dispatch from the Russian front says the situation is not yet ripe for the resumption of the offensive. This meager but significant admission, all that the censor allows to pass over the wires, doubtless indicates that Gen. Kuropatkin is mulling over important plans and another attempt to break the Japanese resistance.

The roads are now dried by wind and frost; the cold is intense and flooded fields have been frozen. Thus military movements are facilitated, though at the same time it will be more difficult to carry on entrenching work.

Japs Driven from Shalke.

Lieut. Gen. Sakharov, in a dispatch to the general staff, says: "The retreat of the enemy from Shalke was precipitate. We found in the village arms, munitions and provisions which had been abandoned by the Japanese, who also left behind on our old artillery position one cannon, four limbers and a wagon full of instruments they had previously captured from us. Since the battle of October 16 we have captured altogether 11 Japanese guns, including nine field pieces and five mountain guns, and have retaken one of our own lost guns."

Russian Loss 60,000.

Tokio, Oct. 21.—Manchurian headquarters, reporting by telegraph, says that the number of Russian dead found on the battlefield and interred up to October 22 makes a total of 16,550. Upon this total Russian casualties are estimated to exceed 60,000. The Japanese captured a total of 62 guns during the Shalke operations.

Entire Force Wounded.

Mukden, Oct. 22.—Every man of the 20 Cossacks commanded by Capt. Tourgenieff, who on Tuesday night reconnoitered the Japanese, left southwestward, and who, near Sandopa, unexpectedly encountered a road-side Japanese force with machine guns, was wounded, and every horse, except Capt. Tourgenieff's, was hit by the bullets.

Former Tramp Gets $164,000.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 20.—T. E. Leary, of Terre Haute, Ind., formerly a poor tramp, has sold an interest in a patent for connecting the ends of steel rails, or a substitute for the fishplate, to the New York Central railroad for $164,000.

Banker Dies.

Sent to Prison.

Carmel, Ill., Oct. 22.—John Robinson, who killed his wife and brother-in-law, Sheppard Patterson, was sentenced to imprisonment for 25 years. Robinson, who is blind, in a fit of jealousy shot and killed both his wife and brother-in-law several months ago.

Fishing Trawlers Attacked by Baltic Fleet in the North Sea—One Is Sunk—Others Damaged—Captain and Mate Beheaded by Shot.

Hull, England, Oct. 21.—A. M. Jackson & Co., solicitors for the owners of 50 Hull fishing boats, have notified the foreign office and admiralty of an attack on the Hull fishing fleet by the Russian Pacific fleet (commonly designated as the Baltic squadron). The official information is that shortly after midnight Friday the Russian squadron fell in with the Hull fishing fleet in the North Sea. The first portion of the fishing fleet passed safely. Then the Russian ships turned their search-lights on to the British vessels for some time and a little later opened fire. The steam trawler Crane was sunk, and the decapitated bodies of her skipper and mate have been brought to Hull. The boatswain and other members of the crew, who are understood to be seriously wounded, are on board a mission ship. The only slightly injured member of the crew has arrived at Hull. The steam trawlers Molmein and Mino have arrived at Hull seriously damaged by shots, the latter having 16 holes in her hull. It is feared that other damage was done to trawlers and that at least one more was lost with all hands.

Two Beheaded.

According to other reports the affair occurred 20 miles off Spurn Head. The Russian ships were steaming in line. The Pacific ships passed without incident, though most of the vessels turned search lights on the trawlers long enough to prevent any mistake as to identity. After the bulk of the squadron had passed it opened fire, nearly all participating in the firing. The Crane was struck below the water line and ran ashore. Skipper Smith and Third Hand Loppott had their heads carried away by a shot, many of the crew being seriously wounded. Another trawler also was sunk, the Seagull, which brought the news to Hull, has no particulars as to her fate. The news has created an intense sensation and indignation in Hull.

Eighteen Wounded.

From interviews with members of trawler crews it appears that the admiral of the fishing fleet burned green flares to show that they were harmless fishermen, but these signals were ignored. Eighteen injured men are here under treatment. One trawler, the Wren, is missing, and it is feared she has been sunk. There is a rumor that the "Great Northern Fishing fleet" was also chased by the Russians. This report has not yet been confirmed.

Feeling in London.

London, Oct. 21.—Foreign Minister Lansdowne and M. Benckendorff, the Russian ambassador, both were out of town and all the government offices in London were closed as usual on Sunday.

Still Inactive.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—The rival armies of Russia and Japan entrenched a short distance from each other south of the Shalke river are forced to continue inactivity until the fine weather now prevailing dries the sodden ground and the tired warriors are sufficiently rested to resume operations.

Recent Events at Port Arthur.

Chefoo, Oct. 21.—The most important recent events at Port Arthur include the capture by the Japanese of further minor positions near Rikling mountain and the severe damage of a Japanese torpedo boat destroyer by striking a floating mine. According to Chinese advice which reached here Thursday, and which are confirmed in essential points by Japanese letters from Port Dalry, the Japanese made assaults on the remaining outer works of Rikling mountain at dawn October 8 and were repulsed. The following day the Russians made an attack on the Japanese trenches and they in turn were repulsed.

Village Destroyed.

Gallatin, Tenn., Oct. 22.—The village of Bransford, on the Chesapeake & Nashville railroad, near here, was completely wiped out by fire Friday evening. The C. & N. depot, freight house and several box cars were also destroyed. Loss not estimated.

Killed by a Friend.

Cornwall, N. Y., Oct. 22.—George Spoor, aged 16 years, of Galeton, Pa., was shot and instantly killed at that place by Carl Carlson, a friend. Carlson was an Indian and Spoor a cowboy in a Wild West show.

The Theaters and the Stage People of Japan

Impressionistic Dramas Are Popular with All Classes—Like a Serial Story.

THE uninitiated traveler theater-going in Japan is the least thing in the world. But I was a good sightseer and did my duty by taking a box to see the famous Danjuro, whose real name was Morikoshi. In one of his most characteristic dramas, and by paying very heavily to witness the sacred "No" dance at the Maple club in Tokyo. This dance, which is as the American said, no dance at all, is the most ancient and classical of all Japanese plays, and until lately the only theatrical performance ever acted at the emperor's court or performed in the palace and great houses of the nobility. I also enjoyed many of the most popular flower ballets, such as the Miyako-Oshi (the famous cherry dance at Tokyo) and other gaudy dances, which, however, belong to quite another story and must not be confused with the serious national drama. If I had the good fortune to have read Mr. Osamu Edwards' marvellous and interesting account of the Japanese drama in his book called "Japanese Plays and Playfellow" before I visited the theater I might probably have found the acting of the world-famous Danjuro most entertaining, but as I knew nothing at all about the subject the Henry Irving of Japan was to me distinctly theatrical. In present-day Japan the law forbids theatrical performances to begin before ten a. m. People used to be in theaters by dawn, although the first chapter of the serial never finished until 10 or 11 at night—to be continued in our next.

I want to see Danjuro at about 5:30, and imagined that the performance had just commenced. At the door I was permitted to pass into my box without taking off my boots. The eager natives were excitedly kicking off their high clogs, for which they received a little wooden ticket. A smiling attendant scuttled on in front of my party and bowed us into our impromptu looking box, where four chairs had been arranged for the august strangers instead of the customary fat cushions on the floor. But the tobacco box and the cups of O-Cha (honorable tea) were not wanting, and the programme, which we could not read, was as charming as a hundredth night's entertainment at any American playhouse.

Our unobtrusive little box was raised up on bamboo supports, which made a sort of gallery, divided into boxes by matting, all round the auditorium. I must confess that I found more pleasure in watching the funny little families down below, who had mostly either brought their day's provisions along with their house servants and babies, or were being served to tea and cake and strange-looking foods by waiters from the tea houses near the theater (in Japanese theater, like a temple, is always surrounded by tea houses and fairs), than in following the marvellous acting and facial expressions of the greatest of Japanese tragedians.

The house was full of gaily-dressed mousmés and scarlet old babies, for the play was one of the historical dramas from which youthful Japan imitates the heroic spirit of the samurai age; but, although there was plenty of bloodshed and realistic horrors in the piece, I did not notice any of the mousmés retiring to the "rear-room," which is provided for the use of emotional ladies. It was, of course, a typical middle-class audience, for theater-going in Japan has always been the greatest hobby of the people; the great nobles and families of the upper classes had classical dramas performed in their own palaces or houses. Indeed, until lately actors were looked upon as social outcasts and were compelled to wear a distinctive costume in public places. It is entirely owing to the present emperor's raising their position that to-day the best actors are invited to the houses of the broader-minded people.

Why the drama in Japan became so popular with the people it is not difficult to understand, for duty and passionate loyalty are the keynotes of the Japanese plays as they are of Japanese sentiment. Their popularity is undeniable. Mr. Edwards says that an actor like Danjuro can earn an income of $25,000 a year. There are two sorts of dramas, the historical play, Jida-mono, and the comedy of manners, Sewa-mono.

In the "Seeds," or "Grown-in-places" as the gallery is called, the poor people who cannot afford to pay for the whole

An Opinion of Lawyers.

"Now, Jimmie, when you're on the witness stand be sure and tell the truth," said the father to his son, before the trial.

"But, father!" began the boy, who saw conviction staring them in the face if the truth was told.

WISCONSIN STATE NEWS

Offers Quittclaim to Wife.

City Attorney Huggs, of Milwaukee, has been appealed to to grant a woman a divorce that she might marry another man. The two interested men appeared with the woman to further her petition. All were greatly disappointed when told that the courts would have to make the transfer. Paul Reiser and his wife, Magdalena, lived in Pennsylvania. Because Magdalena transferred her affections to Elias Kell, a boarder, Paul chased Kell out of the house with a butcher knife. Then Magdalena and Kell came to Milwaukee. Paul soon followed and became a boarder in the house presided over by his wife and Kell. Learning that the law would not sanction such promiscuous living, the three came to the city attorney, each thinking that all that was necessary for Paul to do was to sign a quittance and get the city attorney to verify it.

The Beloit association some years ago covered itself with glory in running down this class of outlaws, and half a hundred of the latter did time in the state prisons of two states.

WOMAN MEETS DEATH.

Murder Is Charged to Son of Man With Whom She Is Said to Have Arranged Tryst.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 22.—The death of a prominent woman from injuries alleged to have been received in an encounter last Saturday with the son and daughter of a man with whom she had tried to arrange a clandestine meeting and the arrest of the son on a charge of murder, has created a sensation in this city.

Mrs. Nellie Thomasson, wife of a former real estate dealer in this city, is dead at her home in Lacon.

Richard Higgins, son of John G. Higgins, a member of the board of supervisors of Peoria county and prominent in politics, is under arrest on a state warrant, accused of murder.

Mrs. Thomasson's death is said to have been the result of a mysterious affair in the waiting room of the Rock Island depot, this city. Mrs. Thomasson expected to meet John G. Higgins in the waiting-room. Instead she encountered Richard Higgins, aged 26; his sister, Jennie, 27, and his uncle, Douglas McDonald.

The son and daughter learned by accident that the woman expected their father to meet her.

Mr. Higgins was in St. Louis when a letter from Mrs. Thomasson was received at the Higgins home. Richard opened it. It is said the family had suspected for a long time that relations existed between Higgins and the woman. Young Higgins determined to make an attempt to prevent a scandal and arranged with his sister and uncle to keep the engagement with Mrs. Thomasson.

When Mrs. Thomasson arrived in the waiting room, Saturday morning, she was confronted by the son and daughter of the man to whom she had written.

What took place in the waiting room is a mystery. Only four persons were present, Mrs. Thomasson, Richard and Jennie Higgins, and their uncle.

It is rumored that a skirmish occurred in fact, in which several were killed, but there is no confirmation of this report.

SENDS TAFT TO PANAMA.

President Has Message of Assurance for People of New Republic.

Washington, Oct. 20.—A letter assuring the people of Panama that the United States intends to aggressions toward the new republic was written Wednesday by the president. It is addressed to Secretary of War Taft, who is ordered to go to Panama to arrange with President Amador certain differences that have arisen and to represent Mr. Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt declares there is no reason why the Panamanians should be alarmed over the establishing of a government on the canal strip and that it is not intended that in any way it shall be a rival to the little republic. He points out the great advantages that will accrue to Panama through the building of the canal.

To destroy any suspicion as to the intention of the United States, the president explicitly says:

"We have not the slightest intention of establishing an independent colony in the middle of the state of Panama or of exercising any greater governmental functions than are necessary to enable us conveniently and safely to construct, maintain and operate the canal under the rights given us by the treaty."

In addition the positive declaration is made that it is the intention of the United States to exercise proper care for the honor and interest of Panama, the people of which should have no reason to doubt the purposes of this government. President Roosevelt then states the specific object of Secretary Taft's trip, which is to receive at first hand trustworthy information as to conditions on the isthmus.

The letter further advises Secretary Taft that the earlier he makes the trip the better, but it is improbable that he will leave this city before November 14.

Panama, Oct. 21.—The news from Washington that Secretary of War Taft is to come to the isthmus next month, accompanied by Minister Obaldia and William Nelson Cromwell, counsel of the Panama Canal company, to arrange the matters in controversy between the United States government and Panama and the declarations of President Roosevelt on the subject, are received with satisfaction in all circles. President Amador is in receipt of messages of congratulation from all parts of this republic.

LEAPED TO HIS DEATH.

While Suffering from Nervous Trouble Noted Surgeon Jumps from Hospital Window.

Philadelphia, Oct. 21.—Suffering from acute nervous disorders, Dr. George H. Purviance, of Washington, D. C., assistant surgeon general of the marine hospital service, jumped from the fourth story window of the Orthopaedic hospital in this city Thursday evening and was instantly killed. He was about 65 years old and came to the hospital August 8 to be treated for neurasthenia and general breakdown. A nurse who attempted to prevent the doctor from leaping to the sidewalk had a thrilling escape from death. The nurse, who was closely watching the patient, saw him open a window on the fourth floor and step out on a small balcony. She followed quickly and grasped the doctor on the shoulder as he was climbing over the balcony rail. He tried to free himself and then caught the nurse around the waist and was slowly dragging her over the rail, when she managed to break his hold. Before she could again seize him the invalid plunged head foremost into an area-way below the sidewalk. We was dead when picked up.

CHILDREN PERISH.

Aid Society's Home at Shelbyville, Ill., Burns—Two Lives Are Lost.

Shelbyville, Ill., Oct. 20.—The Methodist home of the Children's Home and Aid society here was destroyed by fire Wednesday, and although the flames were discovered while the children were asleep all but two were rescued.

The dead: Alfred Peterson, nine years old; Charles Peterson, 11 years old.

There were 31 children sleeping in the upper rooms of the home, which was a three-story frame and brick building. One of the older boys was aroused by the smell of smoke and gave the alarm. The children rushed to the stairs, but before all had escaped the flames and smoke cut off that means of egress, and several children reached the ground by leaping from the upper windows to the roof of an extension to the building. It is believed that the two children who were burned were overcome by the smoke in their beds, as they had evidently made no effort to escape.

The Big Training Camp of the Russian Army

It is an Interesting Place Sixteen Miles from St. Petersburg—A Historic Battlefield.

IXTEEN miles to the south of St. Petersburg lies the vast military camp of Krassnoe Selo ("The Red Village"). This placid scene of one of Peter the Great's victories over the Swedes is now used as the summer training ground for the garrison of St. Petersburg. Every summer some 40,000 troops take up their quarters at Krassnoe Selo, and the miles of white tents and the continual movements of white-coated soldiers form a most attractive picture. The spot itself, too, is a pleasant one, for the ground occupied by the camp includes several well-wooded hills and two lakes; while the neighboring villages, inhabited by a Finnish population, are also picturesque and interesting.

Krassnoe Selo is reached by rail from St. Petersburg in about three-quarters of an hour. The military character of the place is attested by the large number of officers in full uniform with whom the train is filled. At the handsome station of Krassnoe Selo we notice a symptom of the far eastern war in the long rows of goods vans labeled "Kitskily Vostochny Yelzejn; Dorozh" (Eastern Chinese railway; Dorozh). A little beyond Krassnoe Selo is Duderhof, also part of the camp. There upon a hill overlooking the lake is the officers' casino or mess-room, and close by are numbers of wooden erections for the cavalry officers' school, the Nicholas school of noncommissioned officers, several small houses for the accommodation of the officers, and large stables.

The troops encamped here are Guards regiments including part of the emperor's bodyguard of Cossacks in their picturesque long blue coats, red facings, here they are maintained free of charge, at the expense of the state, and given an education more or less on the lines of that obtainable in the ordinary public schools. In addition they are taught drill, gymnastics, riding, etc., and they wear the uniform of the regiment of which they are inordinately proud. One tiny little chap I saw, only seven years old, stood up to be photographed with the greatest delight, and tried to look at least seven feet high. When they have done their schooling they are trained for some trade, and allowed to do their military service four years earlier than other people. When they come out they are helped to find some work, and launched into the world.

Close to the camp are a number of little country houses, called as they are called, inhabited in summer by the families and friends of the officers who are on duty in camp. The officers themselves are allowed to sleep at home if they wish to do so, and there is plenty of social life at Krassnoe Selo. A large number of Petersburgers whose business ties them to town in the summer months, take country houses at places where there is a convenient train service, and many of them choose Krassnoe Selo. It is said that this residence is particularly affected by families in which there are daughters of marriageable age, as the proximity of the camp offers many opportunities to designing mothers.

On the whole, the officers have a good time during the all-too-short summer at Krassnoe Selo; but many of them have now preferred to exchange their peaceful surroundings for the seat of war, and although not obliged to do so, have volunteered for active service. That they have not been more successful against the Japanese is due to the fact that most of Kuropatins' force has consisted of Siberian recruits, whose training is much less a matter of care to the war office authorities than that given to the European regiments. Also, although the physique of the men and the officers in the Russian army receives attention at Krassnoe Selo, there is comparatively little trouble taken in teaching strategy and tactics, and most important, in the essential work of transport and supply.
